About the Programme

This Erasmus BIP week offers an inspiring and collaborative environment to explore practical and creative teaching methods that foster critical thinking, empathy, resilience, and professional reflection — essential competencies in social work and the helping professions.

Participants will:

- exchange innovative teaching practices and classroom activities, including role plays, case studies, and reflective methods;

- discuss current global social challenges influencing education, such as mental health, digitalisation, and cross-border social issues;
- participate in interactive workshops and group discussions focused on developing impactful teaching strategies;
- build international networks with colleagues working in social work and related disciplines.

Target Group

Teaching staff in social work and related helping professions.
